

Mass Communication: Advertising Option

Bachelor of Science (BS)

Advertising Option

Creating content, establishing contacts, and maintaining connections with an ever-changing audience is the key to working in today's media industry. Southeast's Department of Mass Media prepares students to enter this fast-paced field through a combination of innovative curriculum design, access to dedicated faculty who successfully combine both professional skill sets and academic credentials, and experiential learning opportunities. Students select from one of four options to specialize in: advertising, multimedia journalism, public relations, or TV/film.

The Department of Mass Media is one of the largest on Southeast's campus and one of 114 programs accredited by the Accrediting Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communications (ACEJMC).

Advertising students will...

- Learn to create and develop imaginative messages and images to position and promote products, services, and ideas.
- Interact with qualified, veteran advertising professionals in small class environments.
- Gain proficiency in the areas of advertising writing, design, research, strategy, digital and social media, and campaign planning for online, print, and broadcast media.
- Develop multimedia production skills using industry-standard software.
