

Bachelor of Arts (BA)

Philosophy

Philosophy provides a foundation for non-technical and professional careers and provides an excellent background for students planning to attend graduate school or law school. Many of the skills needed for law school, such as the ability to extract the main idea from difficult and closely argued material and the analysis and delivery of arguments, are developed in the study of philosophy.

Philosophy majors study language, mathematics, logic, animal cognition, ethics, history, technology, public policy, law, systems analysis, relation, culture, education, and psychology. Graduates in this field are more than ready to meet today's constant need to learn new skills and apply old teachings to novel problems and tasks.

Philosophy students will...

- Be challenged to think systematically and analytically about issues that impact life, careers, and community.
- Broaden their problem solving, critical thinking, and communication skills.
- Be well prepared for graduate and other advanced study.
- Outperform most other majors on tests, such as the GRE, LSAT and GMAT. Overall, philosophy majors have the highest verbal score and second highest analytic score on the GRE.
- Learn valuable skills that adapt to changing careers and life demands.
