Communication Studies

Communication studies majors develop skills that make them "most likely to succeed." The Wall Street Journal reports that leaders in corporations and industry consistently rank communication skills among the most needed in the workplace. They identify communication deficiencies as extremely common among employees and responsible for significant problems with efficiency, productivity, and safety. As a result, communication studies majors enter the workforce with an edge, having highly developed communication skills. These skills allow them positive recognition and upward mobility as they excel on the job.

The skills developed simultaneously serve the individual and society. Although many majors train with a specific career in mind, the technical and relational skills associated with the major transfer to a variety of careers, enabling graduates to thrive in today's marketplace where most professionals can expect to change careers several times. At the same time, training in communication studies provides students the tools to participate meaningfully in social and political life. Majors also benefit from the department's active membership in the National Communication Association.

Communication Studies students will...

- Interact with well-trained faculty in small-class settings.
- Learn and train in state-of-the-art facilities in Academic Hall.
- Develop skills in oral, written, and visual communication, as well as listening, teamwork, leadership, and more.
- Experience one-on-one advising to determine the best courses and minor (or second major) best suited to personal goals and aspirations.
- Have access to the student organizations COMMrades and Jimmy's Friends.
- Be poised to try out for Southeast's award-winning debate team and/or as a tutor in the department's speaker's resource center.
- Have the opportunity to oversee public events while earning course credit.

Career Planning

Career preparation is part of the mission of Southeast. 100% of programs offer our students an internship, study-abroad program, clinical opportunity, student teaching or research internship.

The Office of Career Services in Academic Hall 057 can provide students with professional career counseling and coaching, resume critiques, practice interviews, job search strategies, career events, networking opportunities, and more.

Demonstrated Career Proficiency is a Requirement of all Southeast Students
CL001	First Semester	Students connect academic career planning by completing an online career assessment
CL002	Second Semester	Students learn more about resources available to enhance academic and career planning
CL003	Junior Year	Students learn about continued career planning, job search strategies, and networking
CL004	Senior Year	Students learn about resume development, professional communication, interviewing, and transitioning to the first job from college
