

Many companies that work with higher education institutions are working to provide internet and data services at a reduced cost or for free for a period of time. Please contact internet service providers in your area to explore if these options are available. While Southeast is not endorsing any particular company, a number of resources are available:

- Information about 86 free higher education resources during the coronavirus pandemic is available here.
- While Southeast is not endorsing any particular company, Charter Communications is offering their 100 Mbps internet service free for 60 days to new subscriber households with K-12 and college students as well as faculty and staff. All Southeast Missouri State University students and employees are eligible. When calling about this promotion, you may have to email a copy of the promotion (<https://bit.ly/2WYXnDE>) to the customer service representative you are speaking with. When sending this email, copy the University's account representative Eric Munson (Eric.Munson@charter.com) so that he can follow up on the order.
- Additional service provider options are available at AT&T: <https://soc.att.com/2UfqfI>; TMobile: <https://t-mo.co/2we8gGH>; and Sprint: <https://sprint.co/3d28b9H>.
